“WEALTH MULTIPLICATION IS NOT ABOUT LUCK”: THE MULTIPLIER OF REAL ESTATE

BY CHIRAG GOYAL, FOUNDER & CEO, GPG

PROFILE

For years, people have asked me how I consistently multiply investor wealth—often doubling, tripling, and in some cases achieving 300% to 500% returns. The truth is simple: multiplication is never luck. It is a disciplined formula built on research, scarcity, structured buying, and responsible selling. That is why the market today calls me The Multiplier of Real Estate—a title I carry with responsibility, not pride.

Dubai's real estate market has been on an extraordinary trajectory. Dubai closed 2025 with record-breaking sales of AED682.5 billion, the highest in its history, marking five consecutive years of growth. This growth is not random—it is driven by informed investors who understand timing, supply, and long-term value. My job is to guide them through that landscape with precision.

Groundwork matters

Take our investment in Maritime City. Before buying a single unit, my team and I conducted deep research: developer credibility, delivery timelines, retail sizing, payment structures, and future supply. We discovered that while most developers were offering large retail units, no one was offering small, high-absorption units facing the main road. So we bought the entire ground-floor retail strip at AED 4,000 per sq ft—20% below market. Today, similar stock is trading at AED 5,000 per sq ft, and once delivered, the valuation will be determined by us, not the market. That is multiplication by design.

Another example is Marjan Island in Ras Al Khaimah, where we purchased full sea-view townhouses with a 50–50 payment plan. Townhouse inventory on the island is just 3%, making it one of the rarest asset classes in the UAE. We bought at AED 6 million; by 2028, we expect valuations between AED 12–15 million. That is not speculation—it is mathematics driven by scarcity.

A disciplined formula

Multiplication also comes from structured deals, not standard retail buying. I negotiate directly with developers, buying in bulk, securing better payment plans, and adjusting cash-flow structures to reduce investor risk. Recently, we secured an extraordinary 20–80 plan on Marjan Island—20% now, 80% at handover after three years. If the property appreciates even 10%, the return on cash deployed becomes 100%. And because rent will cover the post-handover payments, the risk is minimal.

Multiplication is not a myth

One of my investors came to me with a simple request: “Give me 20% return per year.” We exited his first investment in three months with 30%, the second in four months with 30%, and the third in eight months with another 30%. In just 18 months, we nearly doubled his capital. Today, we co-own multiple assets together.

Another investor from Ras Al Khaimah saw her money double twice. Senior sales heads from major developers—people who understand the market inside out—trust me to multiply their personal wealth. That trust is earned, not claimed.

As Dubai enters 2026, liquidity tightening and oversupply in some off-plan segments will challenge uninformed investors. But for those who follow disciplined strategies—buying near handover, choosing Grade A developers, and prioritizing small, liquid assets—the opportunities remain exceptional. s will benefit from it.

My message to new investors is simple: avoid FOMO, avoid oversized assets, and avoid developers who cannot demonstrate construction progress. Multiplication happens when you buy right—not when you buy fast. ✨
